Ausín Andrés, Eva. Empleabilidad del universitario: orientación del aprendizaje basado en competencias.

Guaranteeing good job placement and professional integration of university students is becoming a key criterion of university training efficiency. This discussion poses the need to reflect about the professional and labour future of university students, from the educational area, from the employment area and from the personal introversion point of view. Thus, three key moments are analysed in the university student employability analysis; the choice of the degree and the university; the academic path or trajectory and the job emplacement and professional integration process. The greatest challenge lies in the knowledge, reflection and application of competencies, making university students aware about their own employability.

Santos Ortega, Juan Antonio; Martín Martín, Paz La juventud española en tiempos de crisis. Paro, vidas precarias y acción colectiva

This paper presents an assessment of the current difficulties that young people find in the transition to adulthood. In Spain, the 2007 economic crisis has hindered this stage of life, which had already collapsed. The unemployment, the low wages and the dynamics of mortgage loan, plunge young people into an even more uncertain situation regarding the future. The situation is worsened by the bad quality of specific social protection policies, their limitations and improvisations. In order to illustrate this article, data from the main statistical sources on the labour market and life conditions in Spain were used.
